

March 8: International Day of Feminist Struggles Join the SIT's campaign for access to justice for undocumented women!

Dear members,

As we witness the rise of the far right and masculinism, women and LGBTIQ+ people often find themselves at the intersection of sexist, racist, xenophobic, homophobic, and transphobic violence. Undocumented women are particularly vulnerable to border restrictions, anti-migrant policies, exploitation at work, and gender-based violence. This is especially true given that, at present, workers without legal status do not have real access to justice.

In fact, when an undocumented woman reports an incident of assault to the police, she is often the one who ends up being reported for illegal residence, mistreated by the police, and then deported, while her aggressor very often goes unpunished. These women are workers, particularly in the domestic and restaurant sectors, who contribute significantly to Geneva's economic growth. However, they find themselves facing a triple punishment: abused, criminalized, and deported for daring to report their aggressors.

To demand access to justice for undocumented women and to denounce their deportation :

Join the SIT's action "We believe you, but we're still deport you!" on March 8 at 3 p.m. in front of the Palace of Justice (pl. du Bourg-de-Four 1)!

To prepare our action, join us on March 7 at 3 p.m. at the SIT (rue des Chaudronniers 16) for a sign-making workshop.
